How long have you been standing in line?

Signe-e is an application that measures waiting times in the Swedish health care system. The application is built on modern framework, which makes it possible to adapt the system continuously by introducing new reporting and analysis capabilities, and integration with operational systems in health care.

The high cost of poor web performance

The Internet has not only given rise to new types of business models and companies such as Facebook and Google, it has also changed the way business is conducted, as the incredible success of Amazon confirms. What is perhaps more important is that the Internet has also changed users' expectations when it comes to interacting with any type of company on the web.

Looking at the most successful Internet companies can inspire others. There are two important factors that all of these companies are mindful of and account for in their websites - want to know which?
